Course Description:

This 27-week course prepares international military and civilian personnel who are nonnative speakers of English to teach the ALC in their countries. Primary course objectives include the improvement of the instructor trainees' English language skills. The trainees receive practice in advanced listening, speaking, and reading skills with special emphasis on writing skills. The course includes a practical review of grammar, basic phonology concepts, speaking and writing activities, and readings on American culture. Another critical objective of the course is to teach instructor trainees how to teach American English using the General English materials of the ALC. This portion of the course introduces instructor trainees to the ALC materials, providing them with instructional techniques to effectively teach the materials as well as familiarization with the use of videos and IMI lessons which support the ALC texts. The course provides instructor trainees with opportunities for peer-teaching the ALC and observing classes in the General English Section of DLIELC.

Prerequisites:

Prerequisite for the course is an ECL score of 80. Some teaching experience is desirable. Instructors with university degrees in teaching EFL or with extensive experience teaching EFL should be programmed for advanced courses.
